

English Version

Blockchain technology has emerged as a revolutionary innovation in the field of Business Information Technology. This presentation explores the application of blockchain in enhancing business information systems, focusing on its ability to improve transparency, security, and efficiency in business operations. By decentralizing data storage and implementing cryptographic security measures, blockchain offers a reliable solution to many issues plaguing traditional business information systems. This presentation will cover the fundamental concepts of blockchain, its benefits, real-world applications in various industries, and future prospects.